The Aqueduct Bridge.

The canal is well supplied with water now and boats are arriving rapidly, and a brisk business is expected to be done during the remainder of the season. Preparations are now being made to repair the Aqueduct bridge. The repairs will be confined almost entirely to the trunk, as all the necessary heavy repairs were made last winter, and those to be made next winter will, it is thought, be of such a durable character that it will not be necessary to make any more for several years. for several year

Coal freights have advanced recently ten cents, being now ninety and ninety-five cents to Georgetown and Alexandria respectively. Many canal men do not approve of the proposed enlargement of the locks on the Chesapeake & Ohio canal during the approaching winter, and say that the existing capacity of the canal is more than sufficient for the business that will be done on it after the carrier shall have done on it after the capacity shall have been increased, and that while the motive power requisite for two boats will not be double that required for one, it is certain that two boats cannot be propelled by the same force that is sufficient to propel one.

Washington & Ohio Railrond.

In the Court of Appeals at Staunton, Va., yesterday in the case of Gilland vs. the Washington & Ohio Railroad Company (seven causes), which was argued at Richmond, the opinion of the court was delivered by Judge Christian, affirming the decree of the Circuit Court below. There were six cases heard and decided together. The decision of the Circuit Court of Richmond (Judge Welford) was affirmed on every point in each of the cases. The claims of the intervenors, which were first for salary of President McKenkie, and second, for the construction of the extension of the road, were denied, because not coming within the principles of the decisions of this court and of the Supreme Court of the United States, which gives priority to certain claims because of superior equities over the claims of the mortgage creditors. The contrexpressed its unwillingness to carry the doctrine of the Supreme Court of the United States, followed by this court in its recent decisions, any further than these cases plainly warrant. The contract made by McComb and his associates with the Washington & Ohio Railroad Company, which was assailed as void ab initio, because it was a contract made with two of the directers of the company, was declared a valid and binding contract. The result is that the sale of the road directed by the decree of the court below will now take place. The opinion is a very able and exhaustive one, covering all the points, and was delivered by Judge Christian, the acting president of the court.

The time of the court trying the Malley boys, at New Haven, Conn., for the murder of Jennie Cramer, was yesterday principally occupied in endeavoring to find out who occupied the room in the Foote building, out of which the Malleys were seen to issue on Friday, the 5th of August. In the afternoon Robert Taylor, a clerk in Malley's store, was again placed on the witness stand. After making a number of contradictory statements, he admitted that he visited James Malley at the jail, Mrs. Roilly testified to seeing the girl, said to be Jennie Cramer's sister, at Savin Rock
